

Meet Beth:

An Aussie artist making music that moves you, that you can move to.

Artist Bio

Beth is an Australian artist who has always lived and breathed music.

Growing up in Tatura, Yorta Yorta Country, Beth always knew she wanted to be a singer-songwriter. With humble beginnings, she taught herself to play guitar and piano, and was often found singing in local pubs in Victoria. “Music was somewhat of a liferaft for me”, Beth reminisces, when asked why she began her musical journey. Over the years, Beth has crafted her art of looping acoustic guitar, keys and vocals to create layered songs; always with her unique vocals at the heart of each piece.

In recent times, Beth added another string to her musical bow: DJing. “I love reading the room and creating a fun vibe for the dancefloor”. Beth’s love of electropop, pop, and electronic music has heavily influenced her new songs. Taking inspiration from the likes of Tove Lo, Vera Blue, Robyn, Romy, Låpsley, and Maggie Rogers (Just to name a few female powerhouses), Beth has worked hard to create a sound of her own.

Earlier this year Beth spent three months in LA honing her craft and writing new music, before relocating to London. There, she scouted numerous producers to collaborate with who would help bring her ideas to life. Beth teamed up with the incredibly talented Chris Zane, producer, mixer and engineer, known for his work with American pop band Passion Pit and Australian indie artist Eves Karydas. This collaboration has resulted in a sonically rich and emotionally resonant song that you can’t help but bop along to.

‘Rose Coloured Glasses’ has been crafted over many years of experiencing almost loves, situationships and nearly-not-quite-rights. It explores the idea that we think these people are perfect, but only because we are wearing rose coloured glasses. Although it was born out of multiple heartaches, the soundscape is energetic and upbeat, and leaves the listener feeling empowered. ‘Rose Coloured Glasses’ is a fun electro-pop anthem that you’ll be humming along to, long after the song has finished.

‘Rose Coloured Glasses’ represents a significant milestone in Beth’s musical journey, showcasing her evolution as an artist and her commitment to following what lights her up. The multi-instrumentalist combines her creative storytelling with her love of singing to write songs that move you, and that move you. Throughout the years, her sound has changed to incorporate her love of electropop & dance music, but her ability to captivate an audience with her unique tone remains the same.

Rose Coloured Glasses is out October 14th, 2023.
